Pope Francis:

The example of St. Vincent de Paul encourages us to make time and space for the poor, and to make their worries and troubles our own, because Christianity without contact with those who suffer becomes disembodied, incapable of touching the flesh of Christ.

And finally:- During the course of the week the Church will celebrate the newly established feast of St. Faustina Kowalska, the Polish nun who received a vision of Christ which today we call 'The Divine Mercy'. In 'The Diary of her Soul' St Faustina recalls how she encountered the Lord Jesus in her soul, an encounter which caused her to meditate on what the Lord worked in her for the benefit of all. She says that 'listening to Him who is Love and Mercy we come to understand that no human wretchedness could measure itself against the mercy which ceaselessly pours from the heart of Christ'. Today we live in a world scared by warfare, hatred, indifference, and intolerance; a world desperately in need of the mercy of God which brings with it unity, healing, harmony and peace. At the beginning of his Pontificate Pope Francis called for a 'Year of Mercy', a year to remind us that we are all called to be 'ambassadors of mercy in our world today'. To become an ambassador of mercy, however, we must first recognise our own need for God's mercy. It is only then, having encountered the healing touch of Christ, as He reaches down from His Cross, which gives life and wholeness to our souls, that we will truly understand what it means to 'be merciful, as your heavenly Father is merciful'.

May God bless and protect you all. Fr. Craig
